

Collaborative Planning: Self-Assessment

	Agree Strongly	Agree	Disagree	Disagree Strongly
We improved collegiality.
We created networks for developing action plans geared toward better performance.
We increased the feeling of self-efficacy in teaching.
We improved the faculty's ability to foster student achievement.
We discussed and solved specific problems that arise in day-to-day instruction.
We collaborated on mutual goals and shared responsibility in decision making.
We monitored the impact of instructional initiatives on student learning.
We opened discussion around pedagogical knowledge.
We provided opportunities for reflection and shared critique/feedback of practice.
We promoted the ideas of shared accountability and shared instructional practices.
We expanded our understanding of the curriculum, pedagogy, and the needs of our students.
We ensured that all team members have a reasonable level of ownership in the collaborative process.

Benefits of collaboration:

Barriers to collaboration: