

Strategic Planning: Self-Assessment

	Strongly Agree	Agree	Disagree	Strongly Disagree
Strategic planning is a worthwhile process.
Strategic planning helps me to identify learning goals and objectives.
Strategic planning helps me to think about the large ideas, issues, and problems of my discipline.
In addition to focusing on course content, strategic planning helps me to plan from the perspectives of students' career goals, academic goals, and life goals, and identify the skills, behaviors, and abilities needed to achieve those goals.
Strategic planning helps me to better plot teaching subject knowledge and cognitive skills at the appropriate level.
Strategic planning helps me to eliminate gaps, redundancies, and unneeded repetitions within grades and subject areas.
Strategic planning is valuable in ensuring the alignment of intended curriculum and implemented curriculum.
Strategic planning helps me to improve the congruence between subject content, expected learning outcomes, instructional practices, and assessment methods.
Strategic planning helps me reflect on instructional design and positively impacts my teaching.
Strategic planning helps me to sequence learning in a logical and progressive way.
Strategic planning helps me to articulate the scope and breadth of learning.
Strategic planning encourages me to seek support and collaboration with other teachers to develop horizontally and vertically coherent instruction.
Strategic planning helps me to create a product that can be reused as an audit tool to evaluate the effectiveness of my actual instruction execution.
Strategic planning allows me to work down from big and complex outcomes to specific goals, objectives, and tasks that repond to student needs.
Strategic planning helps me to maintain balance between accountability of what I am supposed to teach and my autonomy as a professional.				